ISCA – International Sport and Culture Association - and UFOLEP - Union Française des Oeuvres Laïques d'Education Physique, have the pleasure to invite you to the training : ACTIVE: healthy environment and volunteering.

The training is part of a series of events that ISCA is running, and will be focused on environment, volunteering and education through sport as the main topics.

CONTENT

This training will deal with the importance of a healthy environment and the impact of voluntarism in society.

The methodology of the training is based on:

- Non Formal Education as a means of facilitating the learning process and increase the interactivity of the event;
- Education through Sport, stressing the link between sport and environment;
- "Learning by doing" or "learning through experience", meaning that practical workshops and individual experiences will be most of the time the starting point for reflection.

OBJECTIVES

The objectives of the training are in brief:

- To extend awareness about environment in the sport for all field
- To build competences on how to consider and integrate environment in sport
- To understand the diverse roles of voluntarism in the development of society
- To build competences on how to use the methodology "education through sport" to increase the active youth participation
- To create a network of people interested in using the methodology "education through sport"

LANGUAGE

The working language will be English, therefore each participant is required to have good communication skills in this language.
